After a year's visit back in England, Kirk returned to the east coast of Canada where she spent a couple of years before moving to Lethbridge, Alberta. In Lethbridge, she was well known for her art and her dedication to teaching young people. She settled in Lethbridge but didn't stop travelling and having more adventures. At the age of 60, she joined the Alpine Club of Canada and spent weeks in camps in the National Parks where the spectacular scenery was reflected in her watercolours.
